THE INTELLIGENCER.

WHEELING, JUNE 16, 1899.

A Timely Address.

An address delivered by Hon. White-law Reid yesterday, at the anniversary celebration at Miami College, on "New Duties and a New World," is of especial interest at this time, because it deals largely with the facts connected with the Philippine situation, its history, and the duties, responsibilities and obligations of this country in the premises. An abstract of the address, the whole of which is quite lengthy, is published elsewhere, and the Intelligencer only regrets that a rush of other matters prevents the publication of Mr. Reid's remarks in full. There are some suggestions which the Intelligencer hopes will be appreciated by readers who take the pains to read; they are of some value in assisting those who have not yet fully understood the real status of the position of the United States, and comes from a member of the United States peace commission which formulated the treaty with Spain.

Mr. Reid answers fully the arguments of the opposition concerning the right of the United States to take possession of the Philippine islands and provide a government. He shows the absurdity of the proposition that the archipelago will be taken into the Union as a state, and also of the claim that the Philippines are capable of self-government at present, as well as of the argument that the formulated principle of the Declaration of Independence (that the governments derive their powers from the consent of the governed), as applied to the Philippines. This principle cannot be applied to the Tagalos until they demonstrate their ability to govern, and the United States completes its work of the establishment of a condition of affairs that will render any sort of civil government safe.

Death of Richard P. Bland.

In the death of Congressman Richard P. Bland, of Missouri, there passes away one of the most conspicuous figures in American politics. Mr. Bland is the original agitator of the restoration of the free coinage of silver, having begun his work on this line in 1877, four years after the act of 1873. Repeated failures never discouraged him, and to him more than to any other one man is due the movement culminating in the great campaign of 1896, which brought the matter before the people direct for a final settlement. In the Chicago convention of that year Bland was the logical candidate, and up to the very hour in which Bryan took advantage of a situation which brought him before the convention in the capacity of a hypnotist, he was regarded as the sure winner of the nomination.

One of the chief merits of Mr. Bland was the honesty of his convictions, and the respect in which he was held by political opponents on account of his sincerity and high character, notwithstanding their condemnation of his financial theories. Aside from his opposition to wholesome financial policies, Mr. Bland was a man of marked ability as a Democratic leader on the floor of the house, and was socially popular enough to make many personal friends among the Republicans. They, with the other hosts of friends throughout the country, freely admit that he had the genius of a statesman, and was one of the few leaders of that party in the past generation who reached that altitude.

Old Glory's Anniversary.

Flag day was generally observed in many parts of the country on Wednesday, which was the 122d anniversary of the adoption by Congress of the design of the American standard. In Philadelphia and Washington especially the celebrations were most notable, the former city being the birthplace of Old Glory, the date being the 14th of June, 1777. At that time the fathers of the republic were engaged in the revolution for independence, and the population of the country was less than 4,000,000, but the great struggle was against the most powerful nation in the world. From the day of the adoption of the stars and stripes the patriotic army of independence carried them.

Could those fathers awake to-day and witness how the thirteen stars have increased to forty-five; that in a century and a quarter the flag floats over a vast republic, greater than they dreamed would exist—that seventy-five million people look upon the history of the splendid efforts in the cause of which it is the emblem—they would understand how they were building better than they knew when they followed it to the great victory they won. They could behold it floating wherever the sun shines on this globe, in every land and upon every sea, where it is respected by all nations. They would behold what it has done within this last year, almost on the dawn of the twentieth century, protecting the people freed from a despotic rule in the West Indies, and carrying a message to a benighted people in the eastern lands, where ignorance and superstition and slavery have prevailed for centuries under another flag. Well might they hail the occasion of the celebration of the birth of the emblem that has never been carried in an unworthy cause, and join in the song—

Forever float that standard sheet!
Where breathes the foe but falls before us,
With freedom's soil beneath our feet,
And freedom's banner streaming o'er us.

Sure Signs of Progress.

Wood county is to have a new court house to cost $89,964, which will supply a long felt want, and be an additional ornament to the city of Parkersburg, which is now justly entitled to the distinction of being the second city of the state in population and importance. Wood county citizens are progressive enough to realize the importance of keeping up with the general procession of advancement and making the seat of the county business worthy of the importance of the community.

Other counties of the state are waking up in this same respect, and the old relics of ante-bellum days when the western counties were little more than wildernesses, and through the narrow policy of the Virginia government toward them were kept in poverty, are fast disappearing. Modern buildings are taking their places, and the evidences of progress are keeping pace with the remarkable progress that has come with the wonderful industrial development that is going on throughout the interior.

New and modern court houses are as important as other improved facilities. Without one a county will remain without a reputation for progressiveness, for by its works it is known to the outside world. This spirit has taken strong hold in West Virginia. In Marion county, for instance, where the development of the great upper Monongahela coal field has transformed Fairmont, the old county seat, into an advanced and rapidly growing city, with all modern improvements, there is approaching completion the costliest and handsomest court house from an architectural point of view in the entire state. There was much opposition at first, to this great expenditure of money, but as the building has grown it has come to be regarded as a monument of enterprise, and the impressions made upon strangers have reconciled the people to the wise policy of building this splendid monument to the progress of the county. So it is in other counties. Every one of those that still have the old-timers should get in line.

Foreign Trade Under Two Tariffs.

Our total exports for the month of May amounted to $93,836,489; our total imports for the same month amounted to $70,131,623, of which $31,615,435, or about 45 per cent, was free of duty. The excess of exports over imports for the month was valued at $23,704,861. The very large proportion of imports that entered free, almost half the total, taken together with the big balance in our favor in the statement of exports and imports, does not signify that the present tariff law is "taxing the people to death," or keeping us out of "the markets of the world." If it shows anything, it shows that it is winning us those markets.

It may be well to remark, in support of this statement, that in May, 1897, before the present tariff was formulated and while the Wilson duties were still in force to their largest extent, the balance was on the other side. The total exports and imports were nearly equal, the former being $77,571,276, and the imports being $79,358,147, an excess against the United States of $1,786,871. The total excess of exports over imports for the first eleven months ending in May, 1897, under the Wilson bill, was $295,253,131. The present Dingley law was approved July 24, 1897, and for the eleven months ending May, 1898, the excess of exports over imports was $171,719,184, an increase of $174,465,952, over the previous eleven months named. In the eleven months, just ending with May, 1899, the excess in our favor was $495,267,053, an unprecedented showing, and an increase over the same eleven months of last year, of $23,547,869. These figures, are not at all confusing. They carry with them their own comment and their own eloquent lesson.

Mount de Chantal seminary closed another year's record of success yesterday and the commencement programme was commensurate with the high standing of that institution, the fame of which is national. The long list of graduates was added to and the honors that were distributed were granted upon real merit. Commencement Day at The Mount is always looked forward to with pleasure by the public, and yesterday was no exception to the general rule.

Citizens who forgot that yesterday was Grocers' Day, and who neglected to make their daily purchases previous to 9 o'clock in the morning, were obliged to go without some things needful, had no one to blame but themselves, but they took it good naturedly. Who could with a clear conscience, regret this annual day of pleasure for his grocer who has served him so faithfully for twelve long months?

Two important local commencement events are detailed in this morning's Intelligencer—those at Mount de Chantal and Bethany College, both institutions ranking high in their respective fields, and both worthy of the reputation they enjoy in educational circles. Full reports will be found of each.

The Intelligencer joins with the press of the entire state in extending hearty congratulations to Secretary of State W. M. O. Dawson, on his marriage.

which occurred at Kingwood yesterday morning. Mr. Dawson was fortunate and happy in his choice of one of Kingwood's most charming daughters, Miss Maude Brown, and one who will grace the social life at Charleston, where they will reside until the secretary's term expires.

Two districts in Harrison county were fortunate enough not to be obliged to make good the bonds voted by them to assist in the building of the Short Line railroad. The company has surrendered the securities on the ground that the $50,000 in stock subscribed by the districts, had all been taken and the proffered assistance from the county was not needed. Such a thing is of rare occurrence, and the people of Harrison are to be congratulated that they will have the road without the burden of an increased indebtedness.

Tariff and the Trust.

Pittsburgh Times: Periodically arises the man who has some argument to fling at the tariff system of the United States. While it is not particularly new this thing, it is in line with the rest when the witnesses testifying before the United States commissioners insist that the tariff is responsible for the trust in the United States. It might be worth while to dispute the statement, but it may be just as wise to assume, for the purpose of argument, that the tariff has made possible the trust. Probably it has, to go even farther. For before the time of the tariff certainly a trust could not exist in the United States. It is the conditions arose which came from the encouragement of judicious tariff there was no inducement for men to invent millions of dollars in gigantic enterprises, nor, for that matter, dollars without the millions. Without the conditions that have followed the tariff there would be no sugar refining companies selling sugar for six cents a pound, nor for twelve cents, nor perhaps for twenty cents. Before the tariff made sugar refining profitable in the United States most men bought brown sugar for about sixteen cents or more and white sugar was a curiosity. Before the tariff made the manufacture of tin plate possible, and made possible perhaps, too, the tin plate company, tin sold as high as $8 a box, against about half that now, and no combinations of capital engaged in the business. The tariff has done a great many things, and if it has made trusts possible in this country, it has made the investment of capital possible and has made the mill and factory possible. Perhaps that has made vast combinations of capital possible. Sure enough, they would not have been possible under any other conditions. The American tariff can account any day for its offenses, and without much effort.

An Atlantic Steamship's Larder.

Ladies' Home Journal: One tidy little refrigerator about six feet wide and twice that depth is the buttermilk stall in this market under the sun. Little tubs of butter are arranged on shelves to the amount of 5,000 pounds, and in company with these are 20,000 eggs. Twenty-five hundred quarts of milk and cream are stored in a separate room, all having been sterilized. This market has a room especially for salt meats, and here are hams, bacon, and tongues and the articles of food without which the epicure would be unhappy and which must be eaten when cooked. Chief among these are oysters, of which 16,000 are carried to meet the wants of the passengers. Clams are only provided to the number of 1,500. Lobsters are not abundantly supplied; 700 pounds is all the storeroom shelters.

This market, besides the things mentioned, fruits, green vegetables, and an enormous stock of groceries. The latter is only limited by space, for groceries are not perishable goods and will keep from one voyage to another until used. Tea and coffee are used in large amounts—about thirty-three pounds a day of each, and anything of this kind which is left over when the ship reaches port is eaten by the crew.

Sam Maguire's Joke.

Parkersburg Journal: Sam Maguire, the well known drummer, put up a good joke on the editor of the Point Pleasant Register, the other day. The trouble is the Register took the matter seriously and now he is begging our Sam for Congress. The H. C. Jackson Grocery Company couldn't do without Joe Sam Maguire, which is one of the reasons why he will never go to Congress.

The United States a Power for Good.

A distinguished historian writes, while referring to this nation's part as a colonizing power, that we represent the "century's political conscience," and that our influence for good over European spheres will be immense. This result was just as inevitable as is the cure which follows the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the great remedy which is found in every home and drug store throughout the country. It cures indigestion, constipation, overworked kidney and liver, allays nervousness, and tones up the whole system.

Helen Gould.
Cleveland Plain Dealer: When the great American public likes a man or woman it likes them excessively. It likes Miss Helen Gould. It likes her with an effusiveness that would have astonished her not over-popular father. No doubt she is deserving of all the tributes that have been paid her. She has given both wealth and personal effort in numerous good causes. This is an unusual combination in the class to which Miss Gould's estate admits her, and on this account it is all the more appreciated.

And how has this appreciation been shown? By complimentary resolutions, by the cheers of the multitude, by the prayers and good wishes of the nation's defenders, by an album in which her soldier admirers are enrolled, by a badge admitting her within the fire lines at any future conflagration in the big city, by honorary admission to the Order of Spanish War Veterans. These are honest and well-meant tributes, and as such are above criticism. Miss Gould has received them with the utmost good taste. She has shown in every instance that she felt honored.

Two or three London papers have seen fit to cast a little ridicule on this love affair between the American public and Miss Gould, but they don't understand it at all.
